Dear Hiring Manager:

I am a passionate web developer with a strong background in both technical skills and customer service. A quick look at my resume shows that my background is in music and you might be wondering what a musician is doing applying for a Web Developer position. You're looking for someone who can work with non-technical professionals, problem solve, be a self-starter, continue to learn, and is detail-oriented, all things I did as a musician involved in international competitions and concerts. With expertise in JavaScript, PostgreSQL, React.js, and various other technologies I learned from a recently completed web development boot camp, I am excited to contribute to your team and help drive innovative solutions.

One of my proudest achievements was during my time at Fullstack Academy's immersive software engineering coding bootcamp where I partnered with a team on a project that developed an interactive web application using languages and technologies such as React.js, Node.js, Express, PostgreSQL, Prisma, and Google OAuth authentication. This experience not only solidified my technical abilities but also demonstrated my capacity for teamwork and problem-solving under pressure, qualities that I believe would make me an asset to your organization.

As a Graduate Teaching Assistant from August 2022 to May 2024, I honed my ability to communicate complex concepts clearly while mentoring students. This experience has equipped me with the skills to understand user needs and translate them into effective technical solutions. Additionally, my background as a Lead Sales Associate has provided me with valuable insights into customer interactions and product knowledge that will enable me to create user-centered applications that align with your company's goals.

I would love the opportunity to discuss how my background and skills align with the needs of your team. I hope you will find my resume of interest and if you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at 682-777-6414.

Sincerely,

Caleb Dodson
